Who We Are

Bellevue Literary Review (BLR) is a nonprofit literary arts organization that mines the connective tissue between illness, healing, and the arts. BLR publishes an award-winning literary journal, and produces dynamic public programming at the intersection of healthcare and the arts. This year, BLR celebrates its 25th anniversary.

Our Vision

BLR envisions a culture in which literature and art are recognized as essential to medical care and healing—where patients, clinicians, writers, and readers come together to bear witness to the body, vulnerability, suffering, and resilience, and where shared stories and poetry foster empathy, ethical reflection, and more humane ways of caring for one another.

BLR AT 25

25 years ago, three doctors, two poets, and one fiction writer met in a hospital conference room, discussing how the human stories around them might inspire a literary journal. Bellevue Literary Review was born, the first journal of creative writing about health, illness and healing.

A quarter of a century later, BLR is a thriving, independent, award-winning literary arts organization that is celebrating a milestone anniversary. You are invited to be part of it!

ABOUT BELLEVUE LITERARY REVIEW

AWARD-WINNING JOURNAL

BLR's flagship literary journal features fiction, nonfiction, and poetry that brings together perspectives of patients, caregivers, medical professionals, and the general public. Our pages have included writing by Abraham Verghese, Celeste Ng, Leslie Jamison, Edward Hirsch, and more.

INNOVATIVE PROGRAMMING

BLR offers a wide range of events, partnering with writers, artists, filmmakers, dancers, and creative arts organizations to produce dynamic public programming at the intersection of healthcare and the arts.

A GROWING COMMUNITY

BLR fosters a community of writers, readers, clinicians, and caregivers engaged in thoughtful conversations about illness, health, and healing.

Why BLR Matters

- The Human Need for Connection: Patients, families, caregivers, and clinicians often experience isolation as they navigate the complexities of health, illness, and healing.
- The Changing World Around Us: As society becomes increasingly shaped by algorithms and artificial intelligence, opportunities for authentic human connection and reflection are becoming more limited.
- The Healing Power of Stories: Stories foster empathy, deepen understanding, and remind us of our shared humanity by connecting people through lived experiences.
- BLR's Unique Role: BLR brings together literature, medicine, and the arts to create a trusted space where patients, caregivers, clinicians, writers, and readers connect through stories that humanize healthcare.

BLR at 25 & Beyond

For 25 years, Bellevue Literary Review has illuminated the stories that shape our understanding of health, illness, and what it means to connect.

BLR is poised to carry the power of story to new spaces, expanding both our reach and impact. Our next chapter will deepen engagement, spark dialogue, and inspire a more compassionate understanding of illness and healing.

Your impact

We invite you to join us as a sponsor in BLR's landmark anniversary year, helping to expand powerful programming and create vital new connections.

BELLEVUE LITERARY REVIEW

BLR'S 25TH ANNIVERSARY HONOREE

FOUNDER, EDITOR, DIRECTOR

Danielle Ofri founded BLR 25 years ago with the goal of using poetry and storytelling to humanize medical care. She has been the visionary editor-in-chief since inception, and became the Executive Director when she shepherded BLR into a 501(c)3 nonprofit during the Covid pandemic (all while working as a frontline doctor in Bellevue Hospital's Covid tent).

AWARD-WINNING AUTHOR

A recipient of a Guggenheim Fellowship and the National Humanism in Medicine Medal, Ofri is the author of six best-selling books and is a regular contributor to the New York Times and The New Yorker. She is one of the foremost voices in the medical world today, writing passionately about the doctor-patient relationship.

BELOVED PHYSICIAN

Dr. Ofri is a primary care doctor at Bellevue Hospital, caring for the most vulnerable patients of New York City. A devoted doctor, educator, and leader, she is a fierce advocate for her patients and for the public hospital system.
